First Annual Conference: The Impact of the Built Environment on the Health of the Community

Featuring Richard Jackson, M.D., M.P.H. noted environment specialist and public health expert. Dr. Jackson will speak about the impact of the “Built Environment” as it pertains to, and is shaped by city and county planning, access to healthy foods and physical activity, housing, transportation and agricultural, environmental and economic policies.

Wednesday, April 18th, 2007 8:30 am – 2:00 pm
Invitation to follow

This conference is for Marin agencies, organizations and community members to come together to look at Marin’s built environment and its impact on health. The focus of the conference will be to increase awareness of these issues and offer examples of “walking the talk” to health and wellness. At the end of the conference, participants will identify new partners and come away with next steps bringing suggestions to their organizations and community.
